Questions	Answer After reading the storyboard about Jasmine’s experience, can you summarize what you believe her journey was like? Could you relate to Jasmine’s situation? Why or why not? What parts of Jasmine’s story did you find the most relatable or realistic? If you were in Jasmine’s situation, would you also try using the app? Why or why not? Was there anything Jasmine did that you would have done differently? Do you think Jasmine’s experience with the app reflects how you might experience it, or do you imagine it might be different? How did the story make you feel about Weee as a solution for grocery delivery? Is there anything you wish Jasmine’s story would have included to make it more complete or realistic?	Answer She didn't want to go get her groceries so she looked for a food delivery app Yes cause I'm too lazy to go get groceries too Too much work to do and no time to go get groceries It depends if the items are a lot more expensive Jasmine didn't compare the prices (the price of the items on app and the price in the physical store) I don't think I would look at the reviews especially for food because I would have known what i wanted, the reviews don't matter It looks good No not really	Answer It's tough to be a student and it is even worse with an empty stomach, so I'm happy for her that she could find a way to order groceries without during a hard time I can relate a bit, because I'm also an international student and I also need to eat. But we are different because I live at home so I do not need to get groceries that often She didn't have a car and she could get a specific groceries that she wanted Absolutely because it is convenient and the app will become even convenient during the winter time because I don't want to carry rice, potatoes, and carrots on the bus in the cold weather. The bus stop is far away from my house too, I have to walk there, it's not right in front of my door. I would have tried to check the price of the items, delivery fee and service fee first before placing an order. If it's more expensive than physical store then I wouldn't use the app. I think I would have the same experience The app now feels more like a supportive ally than just a company. I've faced the same challenges, and I believe no one should have to deal with those difficulties—the need for essential resources should be met. I think having a price breakdown will be more realistic like comparing if paying the delivery fee and service fee are worth saving a few hours to go to the actual store.	Answer She is student grew up in an environment that have access to groceries store easily Yes, I can relate to her story because I moved to a big city adnd finding a way to balance my work life as her The question mark when she was skeptical about the app at first because you should be skeptical about something when you first approaching something Yes, I would because I don't see any competitive app that has this niche of products. I need this food to feel somewhat at home. I'm not sure I wouldn't go for reviews because I know the products most of the time. Or I would rather ask my friend that knows of the food. I feel seen and heard Maybe backstory of Jasmine, she could be student or working. A little bit more context about her background.
